

The Louis Glass house, on Jones Street between Washington and Jackson, on the north slope of Nob Hill, looks fresh and sparkling in the morning sunlight, with lace curtains at all the windows, a gaslight beside the gate, and a neatly clipped lawn, a rarity in San Francisco. The rectilinear lower windows contrast with the arched upper ones; unusual single window caps give the design unity. (Courtesy Alex Brammer)